Experience

Rhys has a thriving international criminal law and human rights law practice, with particular recent exposure to the World Bank Sanctions Regime. Rhys maintains a busy and diverse domestic common law practice focusing on insurance fraud litigation and personal injury.

Rhys accepts instructions across a broad spectrum of matters concerning international criminal and international human rights law. He is a member of the List of Counsel for both the International Criminal Court and the Special Tribunal for Lebanon. He is in demand as a speaker and moderator on panels concerning a broad range of international criminal law and international human rights law issues, with a particular focus on matters concerning the middle east and oppressive state conduct.

Rhys has recently spoken at, and chaired, events at the 36th, 37th and 38th sessions of the United Nations Human Rights Council in Geneva. He has also recently chaired and spoken at meetings in the House of Commons on matters including the use of the death penalty and the protection of prisoners in international law. He is the co-author of a recent article on international justice and the rule of law in despotic regimes. Rhys has expertise in the assertion of functional and personal immunity, alleged corruption, and particular experience in matters concerning the World Bank's Sanctions Regime.

Within his domestic common law practice, Rhys represents both Claimants and Defendants and has a particular interest in high value fraudulent claims with a focus on multi-claimant complex litigation. Recent experience in this area includes advising in civil fraud and contempt proceedings, private criminal prosecutions and pro-active claims by insurers in cases of suspected dishonesty. Rhys has particular experience in cases concerning fraudulent travel and veterinary claims, as well as fraud rings in motor claims.

Rhys has lectured on wide-ranging areas of common law matters including credit hire, fraud rings and personal-injury litigation tactics. He began his career at the bar as a criminal practitioner and is an experienced jury and appellate court advocate

Barristers involved: Rhys Davies

“From Salisbury to the South China Sea, opponents of Western democracy are trying to undermine the structure of international legal norms. Bolton’s comments hand Russia, China and other regimes the tools to do so. No institution is perfect but the attack on lawyers and judges at an institution with a broad international backing is chilling.”

Rhys Davies co-authors an article in the New Law Journal - International Justice: English lawyers in despotic jurisdictions.

17/07/2018

Barristers involved: Rhys Davies

As part of a series of articles on international justice and the rule of law in other jurisdictions, Rhys Davies & Ben Keith ask whether, following the success of the Dubai International Financial Centre and the imminent launch of the Astana International Financial Centre, countries such as Kazakhstan and the United Arab Emirates are using the reputation of English law and lawyers to shield their poor human rights records.
