Freedom of expression and freedom from torture or cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment, are essential building blocks of a democratic society. Suppression of dissent by any State power violates the freedom of its own citizens in a flagrant breach of international human rights. Equally, holding people in degrading and inhuman ways, and in the worst case, torturing them is unacceptable for any UN member state.

Hatice Cengiz, fiancée of murdered Washington Post editorialist Jamal Khashoggi and Abdullah Alaoudh, son of imprisoned cleric Salman Al-Awdah, Yumna Desai and Huda Mohammad, who were detainees in the notorious Dhaban in Saudi Arabia, in the same block as women “driving” activists and are direct witnesses to inhuman and degrading treatment, will share their own stories and their analysis of the efforts to eradicate dissent and political expression by murder, torture and ill-treatment and judicial persecution, including imposing lengthy prison sentences and threatening capital punishment against citizens who dare express even the mildest of dissent. Agnes Callamard, Special Rapporteur on Extrajudicial, Summary or Arbitrary Executions at the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights, will present relevant segments of her latest report, which will be discussed at the Human Rights Council on the following day, including her findings on the Jamal Khashoggi murder and other extrajudicial executions aimed at silencing dissent. Matthew Hedges, the British scholar arrested, detained and given a life sentence in the UAE will present concluding remarks.
